

Introduction

The Physibel applications are protected by either a hardware licence (Sentinel USB key) or a software licence. The stand-alone software licence key is linked to the computer. In case you want to transfer the licence to a different computer, it must first be deactivated on the current computer. After deactivation, the software licence can be activated on the new computer¹.

Note: a stand-alone software licence is not intended to be transferred systematically to and from different work stations. The number of licence deactivations is therefore limited to 5 per year.

Software licence deactivation

In the Physibel application, go to Help → Software Licence Manager...

If the computer is not connected to the internet, you have the option to deactivate the software licence using your mobile phone by scanning a QR code.

If you cannot access the software licence you want to deactivate, e.g. because of a fatal computer crash, please contact Physibel (<https://www.physibel.be/en/contact>).

¹ See "How to activate a stand-alone software licence"